English 7 Short Story Analysis

Title:

I Can Fight You On Thursday

Author:

Gene Twaronite

Point Of View:

Third Person

Setting:

- * Where: In courtyard and field of school (school is probably a public highschool because....)
- I think the way that the characters dress is normal for a public school (not uniforms like in a private school)
 - There isn't many teachers looking out to what's going on
 - If it were a private school, one misbehaved mistake, like a fight - and you'd be kicked out
 - The language and the way they talk suggests that it's a highschool, not an elementary school

- * When: If this story was real life, I think it would have taken place in the past (maybe in the 1990's) This is because the way they dress
- ex) black leather boots
 - ex) shirt collar is buttoned up all the way
 - Most people these days would not wear clothes like that anymore

Irony:

*What: The bully beats up people and always wins, but then he gets beat from the only person he doesn't fight, who is a nerd. This is ironic because...

- Bullies are supposed to be strong and big (physically and mentally), and is not very nice, and give no mercy in fights
- Nerds are usually considered to be weak because they're always on the computer and usually don't have social lives
- It is hard to believe that a small, weak, wimpy, nerd would be able to beat the strong, magnificent bully

*What: The bully says, "I'm going to beat you right to the ground like a rocket falling on your head" and then that literally happens to the bully. This is ironic because...

- you would usually say that as a threat and not literally expected to happen
- Also, because the bully just had to say exactly what was going to happen
- What the bully says is supposed to happen to the nerd, but instead it happens to him. The bully who said that in the first place

Theme:

*Moral: I think that the theme or moral of the story is that in the end, the bully will always lose. I think this because...

- In the story, the bully (Chico) is always winning fights, but in the end, the nerd (Marshall) successfully beats him

Extremely well thought out and far surpasses a grade 7 level of work!!
